Jessyka Scoppetta: Teaching Statement

As a high school student, I waited patiently for the day when I would wave good-bye to my loving parents, and trade my posh room in our family home for a 10x10 room in a brick and ivy clad building. Through my privileged lens, I viewed college as the ultimate learning experience: it was where I would experiment, explore, develop, enrich, find my path. I can now articulate that I had a classical view of the purpose of higher education: that while a college degree is necessary for gainful employment, more importantly it is germane to becoming an informed, well-rounded citizen. Perhaps unsurprisingly, I thrived in academe, and this sense of belonging shaped the rest of my academic and professional choices: graduate school, college teaching, academic research. It also underlies the choices I make now in the courses I teach because I want my students to feel as though they belong here, as I did. I want them to experience higher education as a place to sharpen their thinking, question their worlds, take risks, explore ideas, and, to use a delightfully trite phrase, expand their minds. Therefore, my philosophy of teaching hinges upon the idea that an effective professor is one who serves to facilitate students in finding their voices as they explore the academic world.

Learning is a process, just as writing is a process, and my classroom reflects that mantra. Specifically in terms of composition instruction, my assignments and activities are designed to help students find and hone their writing practices. Therefore, class time is often spent in prewriting activities such as close readings and large and small group discussions, and in drafting activities such as focused writing workshops and short, voluntary share outs. My years directing a writing center have also greatly influenced my classroom teaching: individual feedback sessions are built into my syllabus, so students receive a significant amount of individual instruction that I can adapt to their needs at that particular moment in time. Papers have due dates, but they can always be revised and resubmitted if a student wishes to continue working on a paper. I also tend to offer students leeway when it comes to what they choose to write on or the way they choose to represent their ideas as a method of investing them in their own, authentic academic projects. Once students have selected their topics or sets of readings, I will further guide them with more detailed expectations to help them achieve rigorous investigation and presentation. The readings I do assign generally fall into two categories: texts that help to demystify the rhetorical moves of effective writers and increase student accessibility to strong writing practices and essays that in some way challenge them to examine the world in which we live. For example, one of my favorite essays to use is Dr. King's "Letter from Birmingham Jail." Not only is it a rich argument to use for a rhetorical analysis, but it is a foundational treatise on civil disobedience and justice that every American citizen should be familiar with.

To promote student development, I believe strongly that they need to be both supported and challenged. To support students, I create a classroom environment that is warm and inviting. I am accessible and available to my students both in and out of the classroom and constantly encourage them to ask questions and voice concerns. I will often administer a mid-semester evaluation, and depending on student feedback, have the flexibility to alter the course. However, listening to the needs of diverse students and revising based on their reported feedback does not mean that I sacrifice rigor. In fact, I deeply believe that learning happens when students are challenged to push themselves beyond where they thought they could go. Wrestling with complex ideas, being uncomfortable: these are spaces where learning happens. But, part of my role as an instructor is to craft an environment where students are inspired and encouraged to push themselves.

Ultimately, I hope my students will learn from me, as I am certainly learning from them. Teaching is not a monologue; it is a conversation. My fundamental objective is that each student will experience the joys of discovery associated with the learning process, enabling them to continue their personal growth well beyond the classroom walls.

Question:	What aspects of the instructor's teaching style did you find most and least effective in helping you to understand the course material? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	66.67% (4 of 6)
1	The feed back I received on both my draft and final papers were fantastic.
2	She elaborate everything very well plus show some exapmles
3	I wish it was a synchronous class
4	I found the resources our instructor gave us like the lecture videos and the textbooks very helpful because they told me what exactly to do during major assignments (essay papers) and they sharpened my writing skills altogether.

Question:	What specific materials, assignments, texts, and types of feedback did you find most and least useful towards meeting the stated goals and outcomes of the class? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	50.00% (3 of 6)
1	Leas useful was having to write which presidential candidate we will support and why they are a better fit for the presidency .Some of us are not into politics so it was an unfordable.
2	I found all the Blackboard assignments pretty useful because it gave me a pretty good idea of what the next paper was going to be about along with the pdf with the directions on them.
3	I enjoyed doing the short writing prompts on blackboard, it helped get ideas for the papers.

Response Rate:	66.67% (6 of 9)
1	my professor would give us feedback on all our major assignment, communication for me is key and I was very thankful she did that because not many professor do.
2	The way that the weekly assignments were organized was very effective and helped me stay on track of everything.
3	The most effective I found was the separation of each section within this course and how the sections had their own time lines. There were no least effective areas for me. The course and instructor were great.
4	She is excellent at providing feedback on assignments and papers. I really appreciated the help she provided throughout the semester.
5	She gave excellent feedback on our rough drafts on essays!
6	I liked how the different units were separated on blackboard so we could go back and look at previous units if need be.

Question:	What specific materials, assignments, texts, and types of feedback did you find most and least useful towards meeting the stated goals and outcomes of the class? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	55.56% (5 of 9)
1	all the books were helpful.
2	The most useful I found was the feedbacks on our rough drafts we had to send before the final draft - it helped out a lot.
3	The essays were useful as the rough drafts allowed me to get feedback, which helped my writing.
4	Nothing really it was all useful.
5	Her informative videos.

Question:	What aspects of the instructor's teaching style did you find most and least effective in helping you to understand the course material? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	100.00% (5 of 5)
1	This class was a hybrid of online and in-person workshops. I found it very effective that we would spend class sometimes discussing our opinions on the topic we were working on, this really helped me in making my own judgments and I was able to talk them out. I really appreciated how Professor Scoppetta almost let her students lead the class and would do a great job helping us with anything we needed.
2	The simple instructions and detail oriented schedule made the course easy to follow and understand.
3	She did a good job teaching me how to cite sources. I still struggle with formatting.
4	I found that her videos and the examples she gave us for assignments were very effective. Also, she gives very helpful advice on rough drafts that overall make you understand the objective of the essay better.
5	Giving solid feedback and good examples of how to approach essays

Question:	What specific materials, assignments, texts, and types of feedback did you find most and least useful towards meeting the stated goals and outcomes of the class? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	100.00% (5 of 5)
1	The books we read were helpful but not really the articles for me.
2	Most useful were the textbooks, the least helpful was the separation of the two classes. Since it is hard to combine the time for the two separate courses.
3	Most useful is the Letter of Birmingham, least useful was argumentative essay
4	I found that her examples were the most effective and learning from the book was the least effective because I learn better from hearing the material.
5	I found feedback on drafts and final papers useful and as I way to improve my next drafts. I also thought the They Say/ I Say book was very informative.

3	The aspects of the instructor's teaching style I found most effective was being able to communicate exactly what she wanted in both short lectures posted in blackboard as well as pdf instructions for each unit. I was never confused and if I had any questions she always answered emails promptly. I can't think of any aspect of the course material that was not effective.

2	n/a
3	I found submitting the drafts of each paper a week before its due date for suggestions from Dr. Scoppetta to be extremely useful toward meeting the goals of this class. I am an extreme procrastinator, but also a perfectionist. So, forcing myself to have it done a week early to get feedback on how I can earn an A was very useful.

Question:	What aspects of the instructor's teaching style did you find most and least effective in helping you to understand the course material? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	83.33% (5 of 6)

1	Trying to include everyone in every class
2	The professor was available at all times and she made sure that if we needed anything she would be able to help us.
3	Most helpful was that she gave extra time when you were sick.
4	I'm not sure
5	I really loved the way that she explained assignments. It was always presented in a very clear and understanding way. I don't have any non effective teaching styles for this teacher that I thought weren't effective.

Question:	What specific materials, assignments, texts, and types of feedback did you find most and least useful towards meeting the stated goals and outcomes of the class? Please give examples where applicable.
Response Rate:	83.33% (5 of 6)
1	The assignments weren't challenging.
2	N/A
3	I'm not sure
4	I would definitely say the feedback on the essays. The feedback was very specific allowing me to improve for my next essay .
5	Being after to send a draft to have direct feedback for a better final paper
