Instructions: In groups, discuss the situations below.

Situation 1:
Class offered only on the ground. It is delivered in a style of a lecture. The professor -- a famed member of the department -- is an emeritus; he has taught the class so many times, he does not need handouts or power-point presentations.

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):

Situation 2:
Class is offered only online and consists of a number of video-lectures as well as blog-like discussions by students.

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):

Situation 3:
At a spur of the moment, instructor decides to cancel the class in lieu of visiting an ethnic market located within walking distance to the university.

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):

Situation 4:
Instructor shows a movie in class, for the duration of which she turns off the lights. She loads the CD into the computer and hits 'play.'

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):

Situation 5:
Instructor writes copiously on the board while continuing to lecture.

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):

Situation 6:
The textbook and other class readings do not exist in an electronic format.

Potential access problem(s)?
Solution(s):